"The Fotygraft Album"

The following are extracts from letters of individuals to whom a Chicago bookseller sent copies of "The Fotygraft Album" on suspicion:

"Book just received. It surely is not only a hit, but a home run. Please send me four more."

"$1.00 inclosed. Send two. I want one copy for my office and one for my house, so none of my friends will miss it."

"The 'Fotygraft Album' is perfectly good. I interrupted a busy day to examine it and had a good laugh. I am going to pass up a comic opera which I intended to go to, and spend an evening with your album. It will cost much less and I will have more fun."

"I am sending you herewith my check for $10 to cover the copy of the 'Fotygraft Album' sent me with your letter, and the nine additional copies delivered by messenger today."

"Last night I looked through it, and I must confess that I obtained many times the cost of a good vaudeville show from the 'Album.'

"Enclosed find check. Send me four more."

"The cuss who conceived this delicious bit of humor is entitled to the thanks of mankind in general."

Out of 104 books sent out 79 were paid for within ten days, and additional orders were received from fifteen of the buyers, two each ordering nine more and five each ordering four more.

"The Trade List Annual"

"A Friendly Suggestion"

We are constantly urged by booksellers and librarians who have to daily hunt up information about books, to make the TRADE LIST ANNUAL more complete if practicable.

Is your list of books among the missing catalogues?

The TRADE LIST ANNUAL is the daily reference book of both the buyer and seller of books everywhere. It is more often consulted than any other trade tool in the dealer's outfit, and when a catalogue is missing, it causes an annoying delay in answering queries, and possible sales are often lost.

The advantages of having a catalogue permanently filed where the book hunter expects to find it are obvious.

The cost of having a catalogue inserted in the TRADE LIST ANNUAL is very much less than the postage alone would be to mail a like number to every bookseller and public library of importance in the United States that subscribes for the Annual each year, and in the ANNUAL it is permanently filed and cannot be misplaced or lost.

The cost of insertion is from $5 for a short list of half a dozen titles to $15 for a twelve page catalogue. We will gladly quote the exact cost on receipt of list and request for estimate.

A book review by a famous critic in a famous paper, about a book that promises to be one of the most famous of the year. A review that you must read, to be abreast of the times.

A brief extract from Miss Hildegarde Hawthorne's two-column review of "The Rat-Pit," in the New York Times for May 23.

"It is not the pitiful life of Norah Ryan that is told in this novel by Patrick MacGill—'The Rat-Pit.' The book is a summing up, a condensation and intensification of the bitter life of poverty, told with a wild and touching beauty. Picture follows picture and fate moves on resistlessly, unquestioned, unexplained."

"It is Donegal that makes the background of the earlier portion, and Norah, a child of 12, starving herself for her sick mother's sake, goes with the women to get yarn for the knitting. The biting wind, the snow, the freezing water through which the women must wade to make the town, how unforgettable they are set blowing and shivering on the page, so that the very spirit shivers, too, as you read!"

"A gentle thing and beautiful is Norah, with a natural love of beauty in her. She is happy 'when out in the open, listening to the birds singing, and the wild wind running on the heather,' and her heart warms to all about her."

"Perhaps the most amazing thing about this book is that there is not a trace of sordidness in it. It is clear, fine, noble. The suffering and wrong and sorrow are all there, rags and dirt and desperate shifts. Yet what is most marked is this fine beauty, this purity that is not destroyed under the whole horror of the physical conditions. In all the suffering multitude, so inarticulate, so little given to thought or protest, is the same suggestion of fineness."

"Very real are these people, coming and going in Norah's life. Extraordinary are the talks between them. For they are those who battle with the elements on sea or land, who struggle with immense forces for the breath of life, and their talk is the talk of poets."

"The writer of this book was once a navvy, once a day laborer in Ireland, and is now at the front, fighting for Ireland. He tells us this is 'a transcript from life; most of the characters are real people, and the scenes only too poignantly real.'

"To read this book is to add to your experience of life and your understanding of human beings, yourself among the rest."

THE BOOKSELLERS' PART IN THE NET PRICE CAMPAIGN.

THE prosperity, if not the very existence, of the American booktrade, in the opinion of those who, by their close and long-continued familiarity with conditions therein, are best qualified to judge, depends upon the maintenance of fixed retail prices. Predatory price-cutting nearly wrecked the trade a dozen or more years ago, bringing scores of booksellers close to bankruptcy; it will undoubtedly, if permitted, do the same thing again.

For that reason no duty of the trade is more urgent, no action its members can take more important, than to support every honest and efficient endeavor to secure by open and legal methods legislative endorsement of the principles of price maintenance. They have already received business and economic endorsement, but practical and theoretical knowledge are alike valueless commercially until they are translated into terms of law.

Well planned efforts are being made by the business world to secure such legislation from Congress. Bills were introduced at the last session and will be reintroduced in the new. A federal commission, especially empowered to investigate, and remedy or suggest remedies, for such business diseases as price-cutting has the whole subject under advisement. It is a time, the psychological time, for the booktrade to put forward not only a united, but an enthusiastic and energetic offensive.

Has it done so? In April last the Board of Trade of the American Booksellers' Association sent Resolutions embodying the sentiment of the trade on the subject of price maintenance to representative booksellers in 734 cities of the country asking their co-operation in securing the endorsement of all the booksellers of their respective cities at once to those Resolutions. In the two months since 63 cities out of 734 have been heard from. Such a reply does not represent the sentiment of the trade. The PUBLISHERS' WEEKLY does not believe—the Board of Trade of the American Booksellers' Association does not believe—that anything other than sheer lack of complete realization of the trade's instant and personal responsibility in this matter is delaying these returns. It trusts that the Resolutions will be taken up this week by each recipient, signed and returned. We know how the trade feels on the subject of net prices; but we must prove to the outside world how it feels.

THERE has been some slight alarm felt in the trade that the recent action of an important New York publishing house in dropping the word net from its advertised book prices presaged a return to the old chaotic conditions. We are authoritatively informed that such is not the case. It seemed wise to this particular publishing house to forestall opportunity for legal criticism, however remote the possibility of such criticism might be, by omitting the word net from its published prices, especially since, with its entire list, and practically all trade books for that matter, now on a net basis, the use of the distinguishing word net was no longer necessary. No change in this house's terms of discounts is even contemplated. There is no more reason, excuse or justification for price-cutting, in other words, now than there has ever been—and that means none at all.

THE FUNCTION AND ORGANIZATION OF UNIVERSITY PRESSES*

By
GEORGE PARMLY DAY, President of the Yale University Press

YEARS ago when there was admittedly much force in the jibe that "a university press was an organization whose function was to publish works which no one would read," there was, quite naturally, as little general interest in its organization as there was in its function. To-day, when the various associations affiliated with many of our American universities under the general title of university presses have fairly challenged attention everywhere by the results of their activities, there is very general interest not only in their purpose but also in the efficiency of the methods by which they seek to achieve this purpose. The question of their organization may have been, and frequently was, at their inception merely an academic question in more than one sense: and was solved by each university as the occasion arose without much reference as to what other institutions had done. As a result of this we naturally find that the form of organization was determined in each case by local conditions—such as the traditions, needs, opportunities and even the location of each university. The conditions making for the establishment of a press at one of our universities were almost certain to be entirely different from those prevailing at another institution, which, nevertheless, felt the need of an organization of somewhat similar character. At some of our universities, for example the first development was a printing plant for the manufacture of catalogues, reports and other documents. At others the university press came into being in response to a demand for a publishing house closely affiliated with the university, and concerned, at the start at least, with the work of publication almost to the exclusion of manufacturing. It is rather fortunate both for those interested in our existing university presses and for those who may be planning for others yet to be established that the development has been along these different lines, since much of value can be learned from even a brief survey of the methods followed by each press and of the conditions which made these most desirable.

Perhaps the best example of how a single factor may determine the character of the activities of a university press is the monopoly enjoyed by Oxford and Cambridge of printing in England the revised version of the Bible and the Church of England prayer-book. This monopoly necessitates at each institution a thoroughly equipped printing plant: the profit from it permits each institution to publish generously works of scholarship almost regardless of financial loss. In America some of our university presses, while formed as printing plants, were enabled to proceed almost at once with the work of publication, because of the far-sighted generosity of friends in providing them with endowment funds. This represents perhaps the ideal organization for an American university press, since, while its printing plant may return a profit, its publishing business should not and cannot fairly be expected to do so. The arrangement seems still more ideal when it is considered that such a press with a printing plant of its own not burdened with large fixed charges can, and ought to, manufacture books of the most distinguished format. But although this combination leaves little to be desired from either the aesthetic or financial point of view, it is not necessary to secure it before establishing a press.

As a rule the choice must be made at the start whether a particular press is to be a printing establishment or a publishing house. If the choice has to be made by a university more or less remote from a city and the typographical facilities offered there, and unable for this reason to secure satisfactory printing of its documents, except at great inconvenience, and at large cost, then the need is, obviously, for a printing plant. This plant, however, if it is to deserve the title of university press, must be scrupulously careful to follow the very best traditions of printing and of book-binding: to set a standard, or, in other words, to be educational in its work. It is not enough that it should save the university money or that it should prove itself a financial success. For it is really capable of greater service than this, and should be seeking constantly how to broaden its field of service. As an example of what can be done in this direction may be mentioned the course followed by a printing plant at one of the western state universities. There to the work of routine printing for the institution has been added the prompt preparation and issue of monographs embodying the results of research by members of the faculty. These pamphlets—for they are often little more than that in form—may or may not presage the entrance of that university into the field of general publication, but they are immensely valuable to workers in other institutions and therefore make of a local printing plant an establishment whose activities are of such widespread interest as to warrant it in using the title of university press.

Where the initial choice between printing and publishing has to be made by a university situated in or near a city, different considerations almost necessarily lead to the founding of its university press as a publishing house. In the case of an institution thus located it is probable that the routine printing of catalogues and other pamphlets has been satisfactorily attended to for many years by local concerns; that because of the amount of such work which a large university can place each year the charges have been kept low through competitive bidding; and that the standard of printing has remained high, if the university has recognized the influence it can properly exert to this end. Under such conditions it may quite fairly be urged that the establishment of a university printing plant is, perhaps in large part a needless duplication of existing facilities, and that the real need of the institution is for a publishing house. It may be argued also that in such a community the establishment of a printing plant by a tax-exempt university is not only unnecessary, but unwise, since it would seem to indicate that the university is intent on seeking its own advantage rather than the good of the community. As a result it will probably be found best to respond to the immediate and greater need for a publishing house, and to allow the possibility of a printing plant to remain merely an attractive possibility until it becomes a necessity. There will be influences gradually working toward this, such as the inability of commercial printers to provide rare types for very occasional use. Whether or not such influences will ultimately force a university press, established in a community of the kind just described, to add the work of printing to its business of publishing will depend upon its willingness and ability to co-operate with printing concerns already existing. If it recognizes that it can broaden its field of service by setting and maintaining a high standard of manufacture in its publications; if it seeks to have these equal in excellence of typography and general appearance the best volumes issued by commercial publishing houses, or even by universities which have their own printing plants; if it endeavors, as it should, to develop in the university where it is located a love for fine printing as well as a desire for the best in books, close co-operation with one of more printing concerns is essential. From association it is not at all impossible that the university may eventually find itself with its own printing plant, the early co-operation tending towards a definite closer alliance between the university press and the printer, and the alliance later developing into a merging of the printing plant with the publishing house without surprise or objection on the part of the community. Meanwhile if its work of publishing shall have been well done the university press of this type will have used its opportunities and resources to much greater advantage than if it had begun its career as a printing plant.

The influence that questions connected with taxation may exert in determining whether or not a university shall operate a printing plant will play a part also in determining whether a given university shall constitute its press as a department of the institution or prefer that it shall be a separate organization, affiliated with the university but not owned by it. In so far as the average man within or without the university community is concerned, the result is the same in either event—for the title, university press, identifies the organization absolutely with the seat of learning whose name it bears. There is, however, in many localities at least, an advantage to the university in making it plain to the city authorities that the institution itself is not seeking either to engage in the supposedly profitable work of printing or to enter the admittedly unremunerative field of publishing properly open to it; since there is a dislike on the part of many to have universities embarking in so-called business enterprises. Where no such feeling exists, it would perhaps be natural for a university to organize its press as an integral department of the institution. Where there is, or may be, feeling of the kind indicated, it is the part of wisdom for the university to favor or consent to the formation of its press, under an agreement with the university, as a separate organization, which shall make annual reports as to its business, etc., to the city, state and federal authorities, exactly as other corporations are required to do by law, and pay such taxes as may be assessed against it. In this case the agreement suggested should be such as will absolutely safeguard the interests of the university, in view of the fact that it is lending both its name and prestige to an enterprise which has it in its power to misrepresent the institution as well as to represent it. Care should be taken, for example, to provide that the officers of the press and the general conduct of its business shall always be acceptable to the university. Provision should be made for the university to take over the business, if later this course appeals to it, without payment for good will. Meanwhile the university must be free to withdraw the permission granted for the use of its name in the title of the press. Above all, it should be understood that no works are to be published by the press without the consent of the university authorities. The importance of this particular provision is emphasized because there is the greatest opportunity for misunderstanding here unless some definite form of procedure be agreed upon in advance. The organizers of such a press would not wish to bring discredit upon their university, but through mistaken enthusiasm might easily place it in an unfortunate position by the publication of a single ill-chosen work. If, however, all manuscripts must be approved by a faculty committee appointed by the university this possibility of friction is eliminated. The founders of such a press would naturally consent freely to such a proviso because of their recognition of their responsibility to the university. In return they have a right to expect a proper recognition by the university of its responsibility to the press, which should be free to cover a wide field, and to publish any scholarly, well-written work, however greatly its conclusions may differ from those of the faculty committee.

In some of our American universities we have then direct operation of the press by the university as one of its own departments. In others, we find the press a separate organization controlled, but not managed, by the institution. In one of our universities where the press has taken the form of a publishing house, the organization is described as a private corporation related directly to the university by the provision that its trustees must always be officers of the university, and that the president of the university shall be the president of the press. Here we have apparently as great a degree of control as if the press were a department of the university. At other universities the officers and trustees of the presses are alumni, perhaps not otherwise identified with the institutions concerned. Presumably each university is satisfied with its own arrangements, but because of the fact that outsiders may regard as curious the idea of a university press organized and conducted by those who are not necessarily either officers or teachers in the institution, it may be worth while to consider what advantages such a plan presents. That there are possible disadvantages may be admitted; although none which by the exercise of due care on the part of the university may not be overcome.

It is, however, necessary for the latter to do more than merely seek to safeguard its name and reputation by means of an agreement, such as has been suggested, which shall make clear for all time the duty of the press to place the interests of the university above its own. The university must also make certain in advance that the would-be founders of the press are men who will regard that duty as their pleasure; who will, because of this rather than because of formal agreements, respond to every matured suggestion made by the university authorities for the development of the enterprise: and who, in establishing their organization, have no thought of financial rewards to come from it to themselves, personally, or to their successors. In so far as these men, or any of them, devote their entire time and thought to the work of the press, it is but right that reasonable compensation for services rendered should be included in the operating charges of the enterprise: although it is improbable that such salaries will bear comparison with the larger sums to be earned by those who interest themselves in the field of commercial publishing. But the men who contribute money for the foundation and maintenance of the press must literally contribute this, with no expectation of dividends to be returned to them. For if the organization is to be successful its purpose must be as unselfish as that of the university itself. It should not seek to make pecuniary profits for any individual, or group, or even for the university whose name it bears. Any gains that it may derive from manufacturing, or from the publication of any given work, should be devoted to broadening its field of service in the interest of education.

Thus shorn of the possibility of financially benefiting its founders, it would seem at first sight as if the work of each university press and its development must be left to the administrative officers or to the faculty of the institution in which it operates. That this has not proved to be the case everywhere and that the reverse is proving increasingly true are doubtless due both to the fact that the business of printing and publishing is so fascinating, and to the further fact that more and more alumni delight to add to their own personal business interests some form of work for their university. In the management of a press there is presented a most attractive field for the exercise of any talents which they may possess. If they be endowed with a fair amount of business ability, it will do much to offset inadequate capital endowment available for the press at the outset of its career. Their enthusiasm may be no greater than that which members of the faculty would bring to the task: but it is quite conceivable that the association of some members of the general body of the alumni of any university with its press may cause the enterprise to seem less academic to the remainder of the graduates than if it were managed and directed solely by professors of the institution. The choice of works for publication made by such graduate managers may possibly not always be as conservative as the selection of a faculty committee, but if faculty representatives have the power to veto the decision of the graduate managers the latter can do the university no harm by their suggestions. They are furthermore likely to do its press much good through constantly seeking to prevent the organization's falling into the rut of issuing chiefly theses, lectures and similar local material—if it may be so described. In such works, the press must naturally be interested because of its relation to the university: but because of its relation to the general public the press must be alert to the opportunity and the duty of publishing volumes by writers in other institutions and in other countries. A faculty management may recognize this as well as a graduate management. A proper combination of the two is perhaps more certain to recognize it than either one alone.

Graduate management with faculty supervision is apt to be of advantage to the university and its press in other ways. For one thing, it is far from undesirable in university publishing to have the decision as to what works shall be published made by university representatives who are in no way concerned with the question as to how such publications are to be financed, or how profitable or unprofitable they may be. These problems are left to the graduates conducting the press and constitute the strongest reason for having associated with the enterprise men trained for business rather than for teaching or research. Such men, once enlisted in the service of the press, will bring to the work not only commercial experience, but also a certain business enthusiasm of equal value—since it will lead them to devote all their time and energy to the task of rendering an enterprise, probably doomed in advance to financial loss, as nearly self-supporting as it can be made. Once, therefore, a work has been approved for publication by the university authorities, it is almost certain that graduate managers of the business type will secure for it wider distribution than would be possible under faculty directors or trustees. For the chief interest of the latter must be in their own field of study, rather than in the business side of the press, and they are more than likely, from the very nature of their profession, to be unaccustomed to dealing with the details of advertising, etc., necessary in any campaign of distribution. It is probable also that graduate managers will be prepared to spend more money, as well as more time, in perfecting the appearance of a given volume than would faculty trustees, who will almost inevitably be influenced in their feeling as to the initial cost of manufacturing any book by their knowledge that they themselves can do comparatively little after its publication to increase its sales. In cases where, for such reasons, university presses have been organized under graduate management, but university control, there has merely been a recognition of the fact that no institution can fairly expect members of its faculty to do their own work and at the same time do justice to the possibilities of the press. For the development of these possibilities there is demanded the closest study and constant planning. Otherwise books may be printed but not distributed, and surely it is productive of little good to publish works of merit and allow the world to remain in ignorance of their existence: or to put them forth in such forbidding format as may repel, rather than attract, the prospective buyer should he chance upon the volumes.

If a university press is to feel free to publish works which merit its imprint, whether or not such books will return to the organization the money expended upon them, it must rely in part, at least, on income from endowment funds held by the university for its benefit. If, on the other hand, the press is to remain always most keenly interested in increasing to the utmost the sales of its publications it is perhaps desirable that such income from general endowment should be less than the actual needs of the enterprise. For in such case the necessity before the press to make its receipts as nearly as possible equal its disbursements will prove a constant and healthy inspiration to the development of improved machinery for distribution. A form of endowment then which aids a press and yet does not tempt it to abate its zeal for making sales of its works has been sought by many interested in university presses and has led to the establishment of individual publication funds as distinct from general endowment for the press in at least one of our universities. From the income of these funds works in history or other specified subjects are published each year by the press under a contract with the university as the trustee of a given publication fund. By the terms of this agreement the university as well as the author is entitled to the payment of royalties from all sales of works put forth with the imprint of any one such foundation: and the university is required to use its royalty payments for additional publishing, in some cases adding at least a portion of such receipts to the principal of a publication fund. It is evident that every sale made on such a basis, not only benefits the author and helps the press to meet current expenses, but also definitely increases the resources available for publication work in future. The plan is one therefore which is apt to appeal both to the university and its press, and, it may be added, to donors—since the latter must naturally be interested in seeing the usefulness of their foundations increased year by year. It seems probable that the establishment of such foundations in our universities will increase greatly, because there are always many who prefer giving individual funds to joining in a general endowment movement. Another potent reason is that with such individual publication funds can be associated permanently the name of some one in whose honor and memory the gift has been made to the university. It would be difficult to plan any form of memorial of greater service. Side by side with the establishment of such funds should proceed, however, the gradual growth of general endowment for the press, so that if the scope of the work of any or all publication funds is limited the press may nevertheless not find its operations unduly restricted.

If in the development of this discussion more has been said of publishing than of printing, it may frankly be admitted that it is because publishing seems to the writer more important than printing, if a choice must be made between the two. The function of a university press cannot properly be described as either printing or publishing for the benefit of its own university, however, but as something more than either of these activities, or indeed of both combined. The function of a university press in fact is nothing less than to render distinct service to the world in general, through the medium of printing or publishing or both, and in such ways to supplement the work of education which commands the devotion of the university whose name the press bears. Its mission may be fairly described as university extension work of the finest kind. It is probable that as the press grows it will reflect credit upon the university where it is located, and may even add to its renown as a seat of learning. It is practically certain that through its work the press will bring into prominence writers whose names would otherwise have been known to but few. It is inevitable that by publishing works of instructors and assistant professors the press will aid materially in securing for them, in addition to this larger recognition, earlier promotion. These results are pleasant to contemplate, but they do not in themselves and alone justify the establishment and maintenance of a university press. Such an organization may incidentally benefit its own university, but its primary duty is to the world of scholarship and letters, and to the public at large, rather than to any single institution. It follows naturally, however, that the higher the service the press renders to the world the greater will be the benefits resulting from its operations to its own university.

It is precisely because its function is worldwide service in the cause of education that the organization of the work of a university press is of more than local interest. We must all concern ourselves with the question of how our university presses may obtain still wider distribution of their volumes, not just among the graduates of any given institution, but very generally among our people. For if our university presses merely print meritorious works and find few readers for them, they are manifestly not accomplishing their purpose. Some of our presses are admittedly more successful than others in this respect, but no one of them can as yet point to distribution commensurate with the importance of the works bearing its imprint. The problem then is of interest to them all. More than that, its solution is of importance to our nation as a whole. It has been said that in America we have pinned our faith to popular education. Recent history has shown how willingly our people turn to those connected with our universities for help in dealing with their difficulties and perplexities. Abroad we can see how the aspirations of a people have been guided, if not actually moulded, by the widespread diffusion of the views of certain scholars. Our American university presses have no propaganda to push, but in their lists are to be found many works which if widely read and discussed would give to our democracy the broad knowledge necessary for understanding and intelligent decision. It is not only our business as publishers to exert ourselves individually to secure wider distribution for such works, but also our duty as thinking Americans to co-operate to bring about such a result.

Why should we not then at least make a start now by having a number of our organizations form what might perhaps be called the university press association or the united university press service? There is not time for anyone to attempt at this meeting to go into all the details of such an alliance. One might briefly, however, point out the saving in expense to each press, combined with increase in efficiency, which would result, for example, if one representative from such an association, well known to the book trade of the country, could make several trips a year through the United States on behalf of the allied presses; instead of having each one send out its own traveler with only its own books and visiting comparatively few cities. Another possibility open to such an association would be the maintaining in such places as New York, Boston, Chicago and Philadelphia, as conditions might warrant, of a university press association bookshop, where the complete publications of each of the presses might be found in a reading room which people would delight to frequent. Organized on proper lines such stores need not involve any of the organizations in heavy expense. They would certainly prove a convenience to the general public of each city as well as to the book trade, and to study how to serve the convenience of the public is one of the first duties of every university press. We must not wait inactive for the public to seek us out. Rather we must go to that public and show it the value of what we have to offer.

The idea is put forward at this time not as one we should now discuss, but as one we shall later on probably wish to discuss. In it there is to be found no hint of consolidation—for each press must remain as independent as its university. There may be no immediate need for such an association but there is certainly opportunity before it. Our American university presses admittedly have much to learn from each other, but happily are none of them too old to learn. As a representative of one of the youngest I thank you for the opportunity given me to speak on a subject very near my own heart, but in which many of the delegates here assembled might well be said to be professors, while I am but a student, though an eager one.

DIRT.

THE other morning a cattle man stood up by the desk in the Hotel Sherman, Chicago. Every man that came up to register while he stood there asked for a room with a bath. Finally the cattleman said: "Seems to be that these drummers don't do anything but take a bath."

The first indication of inefficiency is dirt.

The first indication of efficiency is cleanliness.

If people are cleaner in the matter of personal appearance it is a sign, sure, of clean thinking, more efficiency in all their functions in life, including social and business life; that they will demand cleaner, more equitable distributions and better, more efficient government.—From the Cottrell house organ.

THIS IS THE WINDOW DISPLAY, NOT OF A BOOKSTORE, BUT OF A LIBRARY, THE PUBLIC LIBRARY OF WACO, TEXAS. IT WILL OFFER MANY SUGGESTIONS TO BOOKSELLERS, HOWEVER.

THE majority of works on bookbinding have been devoted to the historical and artistic aspects of the art. In particular has there been a scarcity of works on bookbinding by machinery. From the Inland Printer Co. of Chicago there has now come, however, a comprehensive treatment of bookbinding both by machinery and by hand, designed both for the buyer of binding and the bookbinder. The author is John J. Pleger, who has been in charge of several large establishments and was founder, foreman, and instructor of the bindery of the Government Bureau of Printing at Manila.

The work is published in four volumes, presumably to give persons interested in certain branches of the trade the chance to buy the part dealing with those branches. This method of publication has caused the duplication of certain portions of Parts II. and III. For instance, the information on gathering and collating given in Part II. is repeated in Part III. and the same applies to information on cutting and trimming and glue, gum and paste.

Part I. deals with paper-ruling, with especial emphasis on pen-ruling. Various machines are described, lists of ruling terms, inks, etc., and there are careful descriptions of the technique of setting up pen-ruling machines and their care.

Part II., which opens with instructions to printers concerning make-up and printing and a list of binding terms, is divided into two main sections, paper operations and manifold work. Section one covers instructions for jogging and counting, folding, punching, eyeletting, and crimping, with illustrations of various machines for these purposes. Regarding bundling, the author says: "Solidarity of the paper is the most essential feature of a perfectly bound book. The smashing takes out the impression made by the press. The air is forced from between the folded sheets, and so allows them to be flat. A book which is not properly smashed will, after the book is trimmed, show starts, and this, too, no matter how accurate the trimming may be. It is impossible to gild a book if not smashed or thoroughly pressed," etc.

To facilitate gathering the author advises printing a four-point rule in the marginal fold, step fashion, which practically eliminates the necessity of collating. Under the heading stitching, hand-stitching and various methods of stitching by machine are described.

The second portion of the book, dealing with manifolding, takes up perforating, automatic numbering and paging, pamphlet and quarter binding, cutting and trimming by machines

* Bookbinding and Its Auxiliary Branches. By John J. Pleger. 4 v. illus. 8vo. Inland Printer Co. $6.

Part I.—Paper ruling. 73 p. $1.25.

Part II.—Pamphlet binding, punching, crimping and quarter binding. 110 p. $1.50.

Part III.—Blank, edition, and job forwarding, finishing and stamping. 275 p. $2.

Part IV.—Gilt edging, goffered edging, marbling, hand-tooling, and the care of books. 90 p. $1.25.

having one or two knives, and by continuous trimmers, and finally glue and paste. "The trimming of letterpress work," says Mr. Pleger, "should be standardized so that paper-covered books are trimmed a trifle larger to permit a retrim when books are returned for a more substantial cover." He warns against sour paste, "as the fermentation is injurious to the leather, and invites the growth of moulds and bacteria."

Part III. begins with over 200 binding definitions. Not all the definitions are entirely satisfactory, thus, for instance, sprinkled calfskin is explained as "calfskin treated with acid," which definition could be applied equally well to tree calf. Forwarding preliminaries are dealt with in this volume. The section on end-papers describes the several methods of making end-papers by hand and by machinery. Information on edge decoration and pressing is followed by sections on rounding and back-ing by hand and machines. Here, speaking of gluing the backs, Mr. Pleger says, "the best flexible glue should be used, as on the gluing of the backs of the signatures depends the entire strength of subsequent operations." Two pages are devoted to book-cloth and nine to leather and imitation leather. Case-making and casing-in by hand are thoroughly described, as well as job and blank forwarding, and finishing.

Part IV, on edge-gilding, marbling, and hand-tooling, is a satisfactory elementary text-book of these subjects. In the section on edge-gilding the author says: "Extreme solidness is absolutely necessary in edge-gilding, and all books should be thoroughly pressed for at least twenty-four hours before sewing. To neglect this will cause the lustre and brilliancy of the edge to vanish after another pressing. * * * The sticking of leaves in edge-gilding can be avoided if the edges of the books are given a filler before putting them in the gilding press." The section on marbling is illustrated in color. The part devoted to hand-tooling describes the various sizes of gauges and lines, numer-ous hand-stamps, and the practical work in-volved in blind and gold-tooling.

The last two pages of Part IV. contain a number of practical suggestions concerning the care of books from the binder's stand-point, of which the following are probably the most interesting: "When taking a book from a tightly arranged row upon a shelf, do not pull the head-band, but rest the index finger on the edge, and bring it forward until the book can be grasped with the hand. * * * The back of a book should not be dropped on the table before opening, as it flattens the back, and the round will disappear. * * * Anti-vermin varnish applied to bindings has a tendency to prematurely deteriorate the material, and will not insure immunity from attack by croton bugs. * * * Putting a book, especially a large book on a shelf with force, will cause the joints to loosen and eventually break. * * * Sliding books on the table is bad usage, as sand or dust will scratch them. * * * To arrest mildew [on leather bindings], saturate a piece of flannel with an essential oil, and rub the books once every two or three weeks. Books which are spotted from mildew can be improved by washing with a weak solution of alcohol, and, when dry, by rubbing vaseline with absorbent-cotton into the pores of the leather. * * * Leather can be livened up without harm by giving it a slight coating of egg yolk and oil, or egg yolk and pure soap mixed to a thin, frothy emulsion, once every five or seven years. Lanoline, sheep's fat, is the most natural fat that exists, and is an extremely good substance for this purpose, but it is too thick for use on leather, and must be reduced by adding a small quantity of water. * * * A little vaseline rubbed into the pores of the leather with absorbent cotton once or twice a year will prolong the life of any leather binding. * * * When opening a new book, should the fly-leaves stick to the board, bend it a trifle inward, and insert a knife or folder, and loosen the leaves. To hold both parts of an open book tight while forcing the center up will break the back. To open a new book, begin at the front, and turn over a few leaves at a time, resting the left hand lightly on the pages as turned, until the middle is reached; then close the book, and repeat the operation from the back. A book thus treated will open flat and maintain its shape; there will also be less likelihood of breaking the back."

A "BIRD" DISPLAY WINDOW.

JOHN W. GRAHAM & CO., of Spokane, Wash., recently carried in one of their large store windows a rather novel bird display, which attracted a good deal of attention throughout the city. The display was suggested by the Chairman of the City Park Commission, an enthusiast in everything pertaining to bird life. For a year or two past the firm has been selling small bird houses at this time of the year, and these, together with other material, including the stuffed birds, loaned by local people, were used in the display, which was, of course, supplemented by appropriate books. The whole window was in line with an effort being made by the Washington State Fair Association to hold educational exhibits to acquaint the general public with some of the common species of Washington birds.

ALMANACH DE GOTHA SUPPLANTED?

THE WAR being waged on the "Almanach de Gotha" promises to be long and hard, so strong are the defences of that influential volume. The new "Almanach de Bruxelles," to which Germany's enemies have sworn allegiance, is handicapped most by its newness, its rival having been founded in 1764 and having accumulated in the long years of its supremacy many official papers which cannot be duplicated. It seems, in fact, that the "Almanach de Gotha" knows more about the affairs of Europe's illustrious families than do those families themselves, and includes or excludes just exactly as it pleases. That upstart, the United States, was not recognized until President Monroe promulgated the Monroe Doctrine—Washington and Jefferson never knew the glory of appearing on the roll of the elect. The Mikado of Japan is not there yet. He wasn't allowed in Part I, where even Turkey, Monaco and Montenegro were admitted, and he refused to shine as a lesser light so, as far as the "Almanach" is concerned Japan has no place on this planet.

Many instances in history show how rigidly the "Almanach" has excluded the nouveaux. It even defied for a number of years the despotism of the First Napoleon: that too at the time of his greatest power. It affected to ignore Napoleon's election to the office of First Consul, as well as his assumption of the dignity of Emperor, and barred from its pages all mention of the thrones and titles which he had bestowed upon his relatives and adherents, even though Germany, and of course the city of Gotha as well, headquarters of the Almanach, were subject to Napoleonic domination.

As far as the "Almanach" was concerned, King Louis XVI. had been succeeded at his death on the scaffold on the Place de la Concorde in Paris by his only son, the ill fated Dauphin, as Louis XVII., and after the establishment of the latter's demise, while a captive in the Temple Prison, by his uncle the Comte de Provence, as Louis XVIII. This attitude of the "Almanach" continued until Napoleon had been on the throne of France for some four years, when he took the step of endeavoring to suppress the edition for 1808, confiscating all volumes on which his police could lay their hands. The edition in question is consequently very rare.

He insisted on a new edition, revised by himself, and as the editors and publishers of the "Gotha" were confronted by the alternative of the complete suppression of the "Almanach," and worse still of the confiscation of all their unique collection of archives, they were obliged to defer to his wishes. These took the form of a demand that the enumeration of the sovereigns of Europe and of their families should commence with his name, and not as the established alphabetical order required with the German Duke of Anhalt. Moreover, having no ancestors worth mentioning of his own, he refused to permit the enumeration of the pedigrees of other reigning monarchs.

Of course he exacted that due mention should be made in the "Almanach" not only of the sovereigns whom he had created but also of the titles of nobility which he had bestowed. Every one of the succeeding annual editions of the "Gotha" was personally revised by Napoleon with the most scrupulous care and rigid censorship, until his downfall in 1814, when the emancipated editors and publishers of the "Gotha," gloriously recovered their entire independence, which they have maintained ever since. It cannot be denied that the "Gotha" appears to take satisfaction in emphasizing the fact that the majority of American women whose names have found place in its pages by reason of matrimonial alliances with royal personages and great nobles are "non égales de naissance" (not of equal birth) with their husbands and therefore deprived of the right to share the honors, the rank, and sometimes even the very name of their King Cophetua.

TOO FEW?

"WHAT could have brought you to this, my poor man? You appear to have seen better days."

"Yes, I was once an author, madam. I lost all I owned trying to find a publisher for my last book, on 'A Hundred Ways to Get Rich.'"
—Follia.

MACMILLAN COMPANY TO EXTEND BUILDING

AN interesting transaction in the lower end of Fifth Avenue, New York City, recording the sale to the Macmillan Co., of a portion of the former residence property of Thomas F. Ryan, was made May 28. The dwelling covering a plot 52.4x125, at 62 Fifth Avenue, together with the abutting four-story dwelling at 11 West 12th Street, surrounding the corner house where Mr. Ryan lived was purchased by the Macmillan Company for the future expansion of their business. The company, it is perhaps of interest to note, are buying the property free of any encumbrances, and are to pay every dollar of the purchase price in cash.

The six-story building of the Macmillan Company at 64 Fifth Avenue, adjoining, is now being enlarged by the addition of two stories, to provide for the immediate needs of the firm. The new property was acquired with the view to its need in the near future, when it will be used to extend the present home of the publishers. The 11th Street purchase was made with the idea of protecting the light of the proposed addition, and to furnish receiving and shipping facilities when the extension is erected, perhaps in a year or two.

F. C. DODD INJURED.

ON the night of May 27th, Mr. F. C. Dodd of Dodd, Mead & Company met with a serious accident as the result of a collision between his automobile and a street car. Mr. Dodd, who was alone in his car, had stopped at a garage for a supply of gasoline, and was just turning into Broadway near Dyckman street when a surface car of the Third Avenue Railway Company came down the hill at a very rapid rate. The automobile was almost across the tracks when the car struck it, hurling the heavy machine twenty feet and derailing the trolley car. Fortunately, the automobile did not overturn, and while Mr. Dodd received many bruises and a severe nervous shock, he escaped almost by a miracle any more serious injury. After being taken to the Washington Heights Hospital he was later removed to his home, and is now on the road to recovery.

COPYRIGHT NOTES.

WORDS OF MUSICAL COMPOSITION COPYRIGHTED BEFORE 1909 NOT PROTECTED.

A suit by M. Witmark & Sons against the Standard Music Roll Company, decided in favor of the defendant (213 Fed. 532) was appealed from the D. C. of the U. S. for the District of New Jersey and affirmed March 20, 1915 by Judges Hunt, McPherson and Woolley (221 Fed. 376). The interlocutory decree of the District Court had dismissed the complaint, refused an injunction with respect to the musical composition said to have been infringed, and decreed that the costs be divided between the parties.

Witmark & Sons published and sold a musical composition copyrighted in August, 1908, entitled "In the Garden of My Heart." In 1912 the Standard Music Roll Company inclosed the printed words of this song with their rolls of perforated music, making no extra charge for the printed words sent to the purchaser.

The District Court held that the musical composition, having been copyrighted prior to the Copyright Act of March 4, 1909, was protected only for the musical composition, consisting of words and music, and that the copyright having been for the music in conjunction with the words, the inclosing of the words of the musical composition with the perforated rolls did not infringe the copyrighted musical composition.

The appellant contended that this was error because: (1) In all matters concerning the extent of the rights protected by copyright and concerning infringements of such rights, the Copyright Law of March 4, 1909, controls; and (2) because a copyright acquired under the laws which obtained prior to the act of 1909 protected a musical composition consisting of words and music by securing the exclusive right to copy, publish, and print the work."

The court held that the first argument was not persuasive because section 63 of the Copyright Law of 1909 expressly provides that nothing in the act shall affect causes of action then pending or thereafter instituted, for infringement of copyright previously committed. This is interpreted as meaning that although the act of 1909 endeavored particularly to protect works which had previously been insufficiently protected, yet the remedy was limited in instances where the cause of action for infringement arose prior to July 1, 1909, or where causes were then pending, or to instances which existed prior to July 1, 1909, but which might not be prosecuted until after that date.

Concerning the appellant's second argument, that the musical composition was, in any case, protected under the laws which obtained prior to the Act of 1909, it was held that the application blanks for copyright classified a song as a "book" if protection were desired for the words alone, and as a musical composition if protection were desired for both words and music. It was held that since the song was copyrighted as a "musical composition" the reproduction of its words without staff notation, did not constitute a reproduction of a musical composition, and accordingly did not infringe its copyright. The provision that all copyrightable component parts of a work are protected by its copyright was part of the 1909 Law and not of the earlier law under which the work in question was copyrighted.

It was held that the decree of the District Court with relation to costs was not unjust.

"The suit as brought and tried in the lower court involved two distinct musical compositions. Inasmuch as the complainant prevailed in part and failed in part, the court did not abuse its discretion in making a division of costs."

POSTAL NOTES

FIVE CENT POSTAGE TO GERMANY.

THE attention of the public is called to the fact that, owing to the war, the 5-cent postage stamp is required for all letters to Germany.

A 2-cent postage stamp will carry a letter to Germany when mail vessels go direct to German ports, but as letters must now go via other countries, a 5-cent stamp is necessary for each letter weighing one ounce or less, and 3 cents for each additional ounce or fraction thereof.

POSTAL DEFICIT DUE TO WAR.

THE FIRST AUTHORITATIVE statement of the war effect on the postal revenues made by Postmaster-General Burleson announces that the postal deficit for the first six months of the current year (July 1-Dec. 31, 1914) amounted to $6,482,719. The receipts of the Department were $143,249,848, a decline of $456,150 as compared with the returns for the corresponding period of the previous year. The expenditures totalled $149,716,972, as compared with $140,580,006, an increase of more than $9,000,000 compared with the expenditure for the corresponding period of the preceding year. It has been unofficially estimated that the deficit for the entire fiscal year, which will end on June 30, will be close to $20,000,000. Postmaster-General Burleson says: "The deficit is directly attributable to the European war, which interrupted the normal growth of postal revenues. The principal losses of revenue were sustained in the receipts from first class and foreign mail and international money order business."

OBITUARY NOTE.

MARIE MARGUERITE BOUVET, fifty years old, writer of widely published stories for children, strangled to death June 1 in the Rittersville sanitarium, Reading, Pa., where she was taking treatment for a nervous ailment. Before a doctor could be summoned Miss Bouvet was beyond help. She was a native of New Orleans, but had lived in Reading for many years. Among her books were: "Sweet William" (1890); "Little Marjorie's Love Story" (1891); "Prince Tip Top" (1892); "My Lady" (1894); "A Child of Tuscany" (1895); "Pierette" (1896); "A Little House in Pimlico" (1898); "Tales of an Old Chateau" (1900); "Bernardo and Laurette" (1902); "The Fortress of Clothilde" (1908); and "The Smile of the Sphinx" (1911).

PERIODICAL NOTES.

Feature Movie Magazine is a new semi-monthly published by the Feature Movie Publishing Co. of Chicago.

LES BOULEVARDES PUBLISHING COMPANY New York City, which seems to be also the publisher of Smart Set and Field and Stream, has put forth a new magazine under the title The Parisienne.

Life, in an endeavor to answer the vital question "How Short Can a Short Story Be?" is offering three prizes—$1,000, $500 and $250—for the best stories under 1500 words in length received by October 4, 1915.

THE MOTION PICTURE SUPPLEMENT, the mid-monthly edition of the Motion Picture Magazine will make its first appearance in August. This new edition will be much like the first but it will be "flat" in form, 9½x12½ inches in size, providing space for good display of pictures.

THE INTERNATIONAL MAGAZINE COMPANY announce the following important changes in their organization: Henry D. Wilson, for many years advertising manager of the Cosmopolitan, succeeds George von Utassy as managing director of the Hearst publications; Joseph A. Moore, formerly vice-president of the People's Home Journal, is now business manager of Good Housekeeping Magazine; Francis L. Wurzburg, formerly advertising manager of the Home Pattern Company, becomes advertising and business manager of the Cosmopolitan; Chester B. Van Tassel, recently associated with Vogue and Vanity Fair, has been appointed business manager of Harper's Bazaar; C. B. Ames, formerly publisher of Horseless Age, is now business manager of Motor and Motor Boating.

LITERARY AND TRADE NOTES.

TWO SERIES of almost similar titles, recently started, should not be confused: The World War Series is published by Appleton, The World's War Series by Saalfield.

THE NEW Samuel Parsons book, published by Putnam, has been incorrectly referred to in a number of press notices as "The Art of Landscape Gardening." Its correct title is "The Art of Landscape Architecture."

ALTHOUGH "The Fascinating Sin" by George P. Dillenback deals with the question of love vs. home and husband, its publishers, the M. P. Publishing Co. of 175 Duffield St., Brooklyn, N. Y., hold that it is not a problem novel. It is promised for July 1st publication.

DAVID BRYCE & SON, 60 Berkeley St., Glasgow, are retiring from business and disposing of their stock of sheets, plates and bound books, including many classics and standard works. Catalogues of the stock may be had from the Frederick A. Stokes Co.

T. FISHER UNWIN has registered his business as a private limited company under the style of T. Fisher Unwin, Limited, with a capital of £40,000 in £1 shares, 13,000 preference. Mr. Unwin is permanent governing director.

ANOTHER title with Biblical connotation has been chosen by Winston Churchill for his new novel—"A Far Country"—which has just appeared. The publication of anything by the author of "The Inside of the Cup" is a significant event for booksellers and for the public as well.

IN ADDITION to "The Spell of the Holy Land," the Page Co. will publish in June, "Anne of the Island," by L. M. Montgomery, in which Anne Shirley of Green Gables and Avonlea fame returns, and "The Pioneer Boys of the Yellowstone," a new volume by Harrison Adams in the Young Pioneer Series.

A CHILD who asked for "truly stories from the surely Bible" was the inspiration for Margaret Howland's book of that title, which she has just published. These stories are adaptations of the Old Testament tales, retaining all the fine literary flavor of the originals, but held together so that the narrative is unbroken.

TO-DAY comes "Jaffery," welcome to all lovers of Locke. Jaffery himself appears early in the story bringing home a widow—a war-correspondent's widow. She is a person of mixed personality, the Chicago stock yards and the mountain fastnesses of Albania having contributed about equally to her education. John Lane Company are the publishers.

"HUGH : MEMOIRS OF A BROTHER," by Arthur Christopher Benson is not destined to be forgotten. The exquisite literary style of the eldest of the three Benson brothers brings out the lovable personality of the youngest and gives an intimate insight into one of the most remarkable families of this generation. Longmans, Green & Co. are the publishers.

NOW THAT THE SATURDAY half holiday is in full operation for the summer the book trade people in and about New York should make a reservation of June 26th for the outing of the Booksellers' League at Midland Park. The dance, the dinner and the field sports are planned for the enjoyment of all—and there will be numerous prizes and some souvenirs.

THIS IS A DAY of change and experiment in education. Everywhere thoughtful people are recognizing this fact and working out theories and trying experiments. A most significant and informing study of educational conditions is given in John and Evelyn Dewey's "Schools of To-morrow" shortly to be published by E. P. Dutton & Co.

THE TRAVEL BOOK which comes nearest to the bull's-eye this season is probably "The Tourist's California" by Ruth Kedzie Wood, published by Dodd, Mead & Company. The same firm has been careful to carry on a simultaneous campaign on the eastern frontier by publishing "The Tourist's Maritime Provinces" which acts as a guide book and travel book for all who love Nova Scotia and the surrounding regions of romance.

THE F. A. Thomas Company, of San Francisco, Cal., agent for the Montague Mailing Machine Company of Chattanooga, Tenn., recently began suit for $45,000 damages for alleged libel and slander against the H. S. Crocker Company. They claim that C. E. L. Shaw, of the Crocker Company, has made derogatory remarks about the Montague company and its machine to a number of business men of their city.

ONE OF THOSE far and few why-didn't-somebody-think-of-this-before? books has just been published by Reilly & Britton under the title "The Fotygraft Album." With each page comes a picture, and opposite each picture are the explanatory remarks of the small boy who is showing the album—comments in which references to "Pa's" remarks on his relatives make one warm up to "Pa," whose picture comes last of all.

SUSAN GLASPELL's "Fidelity" is being well spoken of in many quarters, and promises to be one of the important novels of the summer. The Small, Maynard fiction list includes also "The Lady Aft" a sea-tale by a new writer, Richard Matthews Hallet, "Five Fridays" by Frank R. Adams, and "The Red Geranium"—but here we find fiction turning into fact—by William Carleton, who, in three stories, tells more about "ways out." Another back to the land book! "Go farm, young man, go farm" seems to be the advice of the day.

THE WEARY WOMAN in one of Mrs. Vorse's stories, who, in reply to inquiries as to how she kept her house in order replied drearily, "I jest fight it all the time," might find respite from her jejune life in a camp—but of course she never will. Much may be done, however, with girls, who are usually quite as eager to get out into the open as boys. A book written especially for girls, "On the Trail" by Lina Beard and Adelia B. Beard, is one of Scribner's most seasonable publications. The same house has recently published "Camp Craft" by Warren H. Miller, editor of Field and Stream, who also tells how to live in the luxuriant and luxurious out-of-doors.

MAURICE McLOUGHLIN's own tennis book, "Tennis as I Play It," is published to-day. It has over seventy illustrations, with unusually elaborate captions by Mr. McLoughlin. It is now newly announced that the introduction is by Williams, McLoughlin's friend, admirer, and chief opponent. To-day also brings "Women the World Over," an elaborately illustrated octavo by Mrs. Alec-Tweedie, whose "America as I Saw It" aroused comment favorable and adverse the year before last. In her new book she combines serious study of what women are trying to do just now with a certain satire on their foibles. "Joseph Chamberlain: An Honest Biography," by Alexander Mackintosh, and "The Second Phase of the Great War," an encyclopædias illustrated London Graphic extra, are also launched to-day by the George H. Doran Co.

"THE LOVABLE MEDDLER," it is said, tells the story of an eccentric Scotchman who intrudes in the love affairs of those about him yet still contrives to retain their affection—a difficult feat indeed! This book, announced for early publication by Reilly & Britton Company, was the one which competed with "Diane of the Green Van" for first place in the Reilly & Britton contest. The fact that it won second, rather than first, place might have been a considerable disappointment to its author, had it not been that she was also the author of the prize winning novel. As a matter of fact, however, she is said to prefer "The Lovable Meddler" to "Diane," the former being a quieter tale with more character interest. It will be interesting to see whether the public upholds the judges or the author in this matter.

THE ROSENBACH COMPANY, of Philadelphia, has purchased the library of Harry B. Smith, librettist of a hundred musical comedies. Dr. A. S. W. Rosenbach said the price was approximately $300,000. In the collection are about 300 lots, or about 1200 volumes. The library is said to have the finest collection of Dickens first editions and Dickensiana to be found in any single collection in the world. Much the same may be said of the collection of Keats items, or of the Shelleys, or the Lambs, or Thackerays. What is regarded as the gem of the library is the presentation copy of "Pickwick" in the original parts as it was issued. This part, or rather these parts, were given each month as the novel came from the press to Mary Hogarth, the young sister-in-law of Dickens. Its value is said to be $20,000.

THE BOOKSELLERS' LEAGUE of New York invites the trade of the whole country to avail itself of the facilities of its Employment Bureau. A number of capable applicants for positions in book stores are available for towns other than New York. Special attention is called to the fact that some young women who have supplemented their experience in book stores by taking the course in bookselling in the Philadelphia Evening High School, are prepared to accept situations away from home. Also there are some applicants for summer positions, men and women ready to substitute for clerks during vacation time. Booksellers are invited to describe the kind of help they are in need of and the Bureau will attempt to fill their wants. Communications should be addressed to the Employment Bureau of the Booksellers' League, 132 E. 23d Street, New York.

They recognized her from her pictures in the society-news columns. The gunman planned to capture her and hold her for ransom. Dr. Worthing and Merithew set out to her rescue. Then followed Merithew's tragic death. Thus Murray Hill millionaires and East Side gunmen make discordant but dramatic elements in this New York story.

Objectionable books are excluded so far as they are noted.

Write your wants plainly, on one side of the sheet only. Illegible "wants" are ignored. The WEEKLY is not responsible for errors. Parties with whom there is no account must pay in advance.

Reference List of New Publications

Recorded in MAY, 1915

This Reference List enters the books recorded during the month under (1) author, in Clarendon type, anonymous books having Clarendon type for the first word; (2) title in Roman; (3) subject-heading in SMALL CAPS; (4) name of series in Italics.

A colon after initial designates the most usual given name, as: A: Augustus; B: Benjamin; C: Charles; D: David; E: Edward; F: Frederick; G: George; H: Henry; I: Isaac; J: John; L: Louis; N: Nicholas; P: Peter; R: Richard; S: Samuel; T: Thomas; W: William.

For books received sizes are given in CAPS, Q, O, D, etc., books not received sizes are given in Roman numerals, 4°, 8°, 12°, etc. Prices are added except when not supplied by publisher or obtainable only on specific request. Where not specified the binding is cloth.

Those desiring to learn the entire publishing output of the month in any one field should look under one of the following MAIN HEADINGS:

PHILOSOPHY	MEDICINE	LITERATURE
RELIGION AND THEOLOGY	AGRICULTURE	POETRY
SOCIOLOGY	HOUSEHOLD ECONOMICS	DRAMA
LAW	BUSINESS	FICTION
EDUCATION	ENGINEERING, TECHNOLOGY	BIOGRAPHY
PHILOLOGY	FINE ARTS	GEOGRAPHY AND TRAVEL
SCIENCE	GAMES, SPORTS, AMUSEMENTS	HISTORY

Besides the titles listed under each of these headings cross reference is made from each to a limited number of cognate headings which collectively give all the new publications of the month in the given subject or group of subjects.

Inquirers looking for books on a specific topic should look under the general subject to which that topic belongs, i.e. GEOLOGY rather than SILURIAN PERIOD; MATHEMATICS rather than CALCULUS; ECONOMICS rather than WAGES. Books regarding specific Religious denominations, countries and persons, however, should still be sought for under their individual names.

"I am very glad to give you in writing what I have already told you, and that is, that I have been buying printing since '97 and manufactured about 700 books besides publishing half a dozen magazines at different times, and all things considered the Vail-Ballou Company handles our work in a more satisfactory manner than any other printer with whom we have done business."

"As we have done business with most of the big printers here and in various other states I feel that I really have had quite a lot of experience with them."

Author of "Mills of the Gods."

Which is the stronger, the tie that holds a woman to her home and the protection that a husband's wealth and standing bring, or the appeal of love? Which will win in the end?

The story of Mignon, the beautiful French peasant girl who marries a wealthy country gentleman, in Geo. P. Dillenback's powerful novel, "The Fascinating Sin," is not a problem novel, but a story TRUE TO LIFE. It is bound to have a big sale.
